Revisions to Handbook of Accreditation

New Official COE federal designator

3. Accreditation Manager (AM) :

Many organizations will often designate an individual, who is not a part of the command team, to manage accreditation, annual reporting and the development of the self-study. Any individual who is in this role must be a part of all communications between COE and the organization. Therefore, each institution may choose to, but is not required to, designate an Accreditation Manager (AM) by notifying the Council. The accreditation manager must be a permanent, full-time staff member at the main campus of the institution - other than the chief administrator or the accreditation liaison. The accreditation manager will be able to communicate directly with COE to plan, ask questions, and generally manage the organizations accreditation processes, files, etc., to keep them current with the annual changes from the commission. This individual should also be a primary person to attend annual COE conferences to stay abreast of annual accreditation updates.
